

Content

Title: Alexander Gilles, „Libelle“ over the quarry pond in Baden-Baden

Picture: David Richter-Trummer

8	It's fun when you fly anyway With a low base, congestion, and headwinds, we took off, piloting the Libelle through mixed weather from Micheldorf to Dresden and back to Austria.	58	„You're brave!“ It takes a little courage, but then you can fly 500 km with the ASK 18.
18	Pushing boundaries – 757 miles in a club-class glider In the Föhn, you can fly long distances even with a 50-year-old LS1.	62	The IRIS All-in-one from LX Navigation Combining instruments creates space in the instrument panel.
24	A summer dedicated to competitive flying We accompany the sports soldiers, who are facing intensive days of training and competition.	66	As an Oldie the Skylark becomes a Star The “skylark” was outclassed by the competition, but as an oldie it is becoming a star.
30	How workable thermals are created A glider needs updrafts at least 200 meters wide to be able to use them.	72	Upwind at the edge of the Alps From a struggling club to a pioneer of sustainable aviation in the Alpine foothills.
36	Where to put the wing when slipping? Does the leading (lower) wing of the slip should be directed against the wind	78	When glider pilots began to deploy an engine A personal look back at the beginnings of the motor glider era.
42	Aviation road movie Just follow the weather and your curiosity – no tow plane or car required.	82	The Berlin B13e: the long way to electric glider The B13 took off for the first time in 1991 – today it is a turbo-electric glider suitable for long-distance flights.
52	Crash in the mountains Too close to the terrain, unusually strong downdrafts. An accident involving an LS4 that ended without serious consequences.	88	The optimized winch launch (Part 4) The influence of the wind.
56	From trade fair booth to the cockpit standard The successor to Easy Memory Item now also allows you to create and edit checklists.	92	Freedom captured in pictures Flying and painting, an unusual combination.
		3	Editorial
		5	Reader's Mail
		98	Impressum/Vorschau